
ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Robert S. Brams is a partner with the law firm of Patton Boggs LLP in Washington, D.C. He has over 20 years of experience in negotiating the various complex contractual arrangements associated with the development of major engineering and construction projects and in mediating, arbitrating, and litigating disputes arising on many of the largest infrastructure and construction projects in the world. Mr. Brams regularly assists owners, developers, architects, engineers, and contractors on a broad range of project delivery, procurement, and risk management issues associated with both public and private sector projects. Mr. Brams' practice also focuses on pre- and post-award bid protests on federal and state projects. Mr. Brams started his career as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Christine Miller, U.S. Court of Federal Claims. He serves on various industry boards, including the Advisory Board for Thompson West's publication, The Construction Contractor.

Christyne K. Brennan is an associate in the Government and Commercial Contracts practice in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. Ms. Brennan is Managing Editor of the American Bar Association's Public Contract Law Journal, Vice-Chair of the Contract Claims and Disputes Resolution Committee of the Section of Public Contract Law, and a member of the Forum on the Construction Industry. Ms. Brennan received her B.A. from Furman University and earned a J.D. with honors from Georgetown University, where she served as Administrative Editor of the Georgetown Journal of Law and Public Policy. Ms. Brennan has written and lectured on various government and construction contract issues.

Michael J. Carrato is a Unit Counsel for ALSTOM, a global leader in the world of power generation and rail infrastructure. Prior to joining Alstom, Mr. Carrato was an Associate in the Government Contracts and Construction Groups at Patton Boggs LLP in Washington, D.C. In his current capacity with ALSTOM, Mr. Carrato oversees complex construction and product manufacturing transactions and manages the resolution of disputes. He holds a B.S. in Civil Engineering from Virginia Tech and a J.D. from Seton Hall University School of Law.

Robert K. Cox is a senior partner of Watt, Tieder, Hoffar & Fitzgerald, LLP, working in the McLean, Virginia, office. Since 1976, he has focused his legal practice on construction, government contracts, and surety law issues. Mr. Cox has authored numerous articles on construction and surety law issues and frequently teaches construction law and public contract courses. He was a member of the Board of Governors of the Virginia State Bar Section of Construction Law and Public Contracts, and was Chair of the Section 1999–2000. Chambers USA has included Mr. Cox in its list of Top Construction Lawyers in Virginia 2003–2009. He is also listed in Best Lawyers in America 2007, 2008, 2010; International Who's Who of Business Lawyers, Construction Section 2005–2009; Virginia Super Lawyers 2006–2009, and Washington, D.C. Super Lawyers 2007–2009. Mr. Cox is a graduate of Cornell University and an honors graduate of George Washington University Law School.

David H. Corkum is a Partner at Donovan Hatem LLP. He is intimately familiar with every aspect of the planning, design, and construction of heavy civil and underground construction projects. His practice includes the representation of architects, engineers, and construction managers involved in the construction industry, with a special emphasis on underground projects. He also assists project owners in developing procurement strategies and drafting contract documents for large construction programs. Mr. Corkum received his B.S. from Northeastern University and his J.D. from Suffolk University.

W. Stephen Dale is a partner with the law firm Smith Pachter McWhorter, PLC where his practice focuses on construction law, government contracts, and commercial litigation. Smith Pachter McWhorter PLC's construction practice encompasses all phases of the contracting process, from contract bidding and negotiation through contract administration and performance to claims and litigation, including terminations. Its clients have included a wide variety of public and private owners, general and specialty contractors, EPC contractors, architects and engineers, equipment manufacturers and sureties. They are a mix of Engineering News Record 500 firms, as well as small and medium size organizations, including minority- and women-owned businesses. Mr. Dale's experience includes counseling national, international, and local construction and engineering firms in all forms of construction issues from contract administration to claims and litigation, on federal, state, and private construction projects. His practice has also included counseling construction clients on Public-Private-Partnerships for major infrastructure improvements. Mr. Dale has advised on a broad range of projects, including rail transit, highway, mining, environmental remediation, wastewater treatment, military installations, and navigational locks. Mr. Dale completed both his undergraduate and legal education at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he served as the Executive Editor of the North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation. He currently serves on the Board of Governors of the American Society of Civil Engineers Construction Institute and the ASCE Committee on Professional Practice.

Daniel J. Donohue is a shareholder in the Tysons Corner, Virginia, office of Akerman Senterfitt LLP. His law practice concentrates on litigation of disputes arising from federal, state and municipal construction contracts and contracts for supplies and services. He advises client on government contracts compliance issues and tries government contracts disputes in the Federal Agency Boards of Contract Appeals and Court of Federal Claims. Mr. Donohue is a member of the adjunct faculty of George Mason University Law School, where he teaches Appellate Writing and Legal Drafting. He is a 1975 graduate of the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, Massachusetts, and received his J.D. from the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C.

Denise E. Farris is the managing member of The Farris Law Firm LLC in Kansas City, Missouri. Ms. Farris is past Chair of Division 10 of the American Bar Association Forum on the Construction Industry. She served as past Chair of the Missouri Bar and Kansas City Metropolitan Bar Association Construction Law Committees and was recently named “Best of the Bar Construction Law” by the Kansas City Business Journal. Ms. Farris currently represents the national organization of Women Impacting Public Policy on an advisory council to the U.S. Senate Small Business Committee, where she was offered congressional testimony on various aspects of affirmative action legislation and rules. She has enjoyed more than 20 years of practice in commercial construction law with a special emphasis in government contracting, constitutional parameters of affirmative action programs, and federal schedule or IDIQ contracts, and served as the first female representative to Kansas City, Missouri, and the Unified Government Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kansas Fairness in Contract Boards.

Cheryl A. Feeley is an associate in Holland & Knight’s Litigation Section in Washington, D.C. Ms. Feeley’s construction litigation practice focuses on representing general contractors on major construction disputes. Her experience includes bid protests, claims for equitable adjustment, qui tam actions under the False Claims Act, Buy American Act compliance issues, and general government contracts advice. Ms. Feeley is a 2008 graduate of George Washington University Law School.

Donald G. Gavin is a shareholder in the Tysons Corner, Virginia, office of Akerman Senterfitt, LLP. He was a founding Shareholder of Wickwire Gavin, P.C., a past National Chair of the Section of Public Contract Law of the American Bar Association, and a past Member of the Board of Governors of the Bar Association for the U.S. Court of Federal Claims. Early in his career, Mr. Gavin served as a Captain in the United States Army Judge Advocate General Corps, principally as a procurement legal advisor to the Army Corps of Engineers. Mr. Gavin has provided representation to owners, contractors, public entities, design professionals, and sureties with issues involving public contracts, construction, suretyship, and grants. His experience includes disputes resolution responsibility related to public buildings and infrastructure; major petroleum, gas, chemical, wastewater, power production facilities; and supplies in South America, Europe, Africa, and Asia, as well as within the United States, both offshore and land-based. Mr. Gavin also acts as an arbitrator and mediator for disputes resolution around the world. Currently, he is a Fellow of the American College of Construction Lawyers, a Member of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators of London, and a Certified International Mediator. Mr. Gavin is a graduate of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, and received his J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania Law School in 1967. In 1972, he received his LL.M. from the National Law Center of George Washington University in Government Procurement Law.

Elizabeth M. Gill is a senior associate with the law firm of Patton Boggs LLP specializing in federal government contracting. She counsels clients on a variety of procurement matters concerning contract preparation, negotiation, and performance. Ms. Gill litigates contract actions in federal courts, the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals, and the Government Accountability Office. She routinely works with companies to prepare and implement compliance and training programs and counsels small businesses on the intricacies of contracting with the federal government. Ms. Gill is a graduate of the University of Richmond and the American University Washington College of Law and is a member of the Public Contract Law Section of the ABA, the Board of Contract Appeals Bar Association, and the Federal Bar Association. Ms. Gill writes and speaks frequently on public contract law issues.

Michael Guiffré is a partner at Patton Boggs LLP and concentrates his practice on government and commercial contract litigation and arbitration. A graduate of Georgetown University Law Center, Mr. Guiffré has over 15 years of experience representing companies, foundations, individuals, and government agencies before federal and state courts and administrative boards in cases involving claims, default terminations, subcontractor disputes, and bid protests. Mr. Guiffré also counsels and represents clients regarding the full spectrum of government contract matters, including contract administration, claims, procurement fraud, and suspension and debarment matters. Prior to joining Patton Boggs, Mr. Guiffré served as an officer and an attorney in the Army, where he obtained considerable trial and appellate experience. Working in the Office of the Chief Trial Attorney, he managed complex contract litigation and fraud investigations. He was lead counsel in dozens of appeals, and he prosecuted numerous criminal offenses.

Dirk D. Haire is a partner at the Washington, D.C. office of Smith, Currie & Hancock LLP. Mr. Haire currently sits on the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) and Maryland Chapter AGC Boards of Directors and serves on multiple national committees and councils, including the AGC of America Federal Acquisition Regulation Committee. He practices in the areas of construction law and government contracts, with a focus on federal construction. Mr. Haire represents contractors and owners in virtually all phases of both the public and private sectors of the construction industry. He is a frequent lecturer on matters relating to federal construction and recently presented for AGC's comprehensive webinar series examining the procurement, contract administration, reporting, and disputes phases of federal construction contracting. A graduate of George Washington University Law School, Mr. Haire was a senior director at AGC of America before entering private practice.

Larry D. Harris is a shareholder in the Washington, D.C. office of Greenberg Traurig LLP. Mr. Harris' experience in government contracts and construction matters includes counseling, transactions, and litigation before boards of contract appeals, in state and federal courts, and arbitration tribunals in cases involving changes, acceleration, delay, disruption, defective work, and termination. He has counseled domestic and international contractors, sub-contractors, design professionals, and private and public owners in matters regarding contract formation, joint venturing, bidding, contract performance, minority business participation, and dispute resolution under supply, service, aerospace, and construction contracts. Mr. Harris is a past Chair of the ABA Forum on the Construction Industry (1998–1999) and is a Fellow of the American College of Construction Lawyers, Board of Governors (1999–2002).

David J. Hatem is a Founding Partner of the multi-practice law firm, Donovan Hatem LLP. He leads the firm's Professional Practices Group, which represents engineers, architects, and construction management professionals. Mr. Hatem has been practicing for over 30 years and is nationally recognized for his expertise in representing engineers and architects. He frequently lectures on issues of professional liability for design and construction management professionals, risk management, and design-build procurement issues, and has authored numerous related articles. He edited Subsurface Conditions: Risk Management for Design and Construction Management Professionals, Design-Build Subsurface Projects, now undergoing a second edition, and is co-editor and chapter contributor for Megaprojects: Challenges and Recommended Practices (American Council of Engineering Companies 2009). Mr. Hatem has served as ACEC/Massachusetts Counsel since 1988 and was the recipient of the 2008 American Council of Engineering Companies of Massachusetts Distinguished Service Award. He was also selected for the sixth consecutive year for inclusion in The Best Lawyers in America 2009 in the fields of Construction

Law and Professional Malpractice. He currently teaches Legal Aspects of Engineering at Tufts University. Mr. Hatem received his B.A. and J.D. from Boston University.

J. Todd Henry is a partner in the Seattle, Washington, office of Oles Morrison Rinker & Baker, LLP. His litigation practice focuses on the representation of parties in construction-related disputes. A fourth generation contractor, Mr. Henry spent nearly 20 years in construction management before receiving his J.D. cum laude from Seattle University School of Law, where he received the additional honors of election to the Order of the Barristers and Phi Delta Phi. Mr. Henry is a frequent lecturer on construction law issues to industry groups as well as an instructor on litigation skills to lawyers and law students. In addition to having published many articles on construction law, Mr. Henry has been a contributing author and editor of the annual Aspen Construction Law Update since 2003.

David Innis is an attorney in the Office of Counsel of the United States Army Corps of Engineers, Kansas City District. Mr. Innis served as a member of the Council of the American Bar Association Public Contracts Law Section. He currently serves as co-chair of its State and Local Procurement Division and of its Teleconference Educational Programs Committee. All opinions are exclusively those of the author and not any instrumentality of the Department of Defense.

Geoffrey T. Keating is counsel to contractors, engineers, public and private owners, and sureties. His work has encompassed all phases of construction contracting with particular emphasis on public works and international infrastructure. Representative projects include military installations, dams, subways, bridges, and power plants. Overseas work includes U.S. Embassy, USAID, and other civil projects in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Afghanistan, Brazil, Russia, Italy, and Mexico. Mr. Keating has litigated many complex construction disputes in courts, boards of contract appeals, and arbitration. He also serves as an arbitrator. In 2006–2007 he consulted on public procurement regulations for the new Iraqi government and the government of Vietnam. He is a fellow of the American College of Construction Lawyers and on the West Group Construction Advisory Board. Mr. Keating is Of Counsel to McManus & Darden, LLP, Washington, D.C.

Thomas J. Kelleher, Jr. is a senior partner of Smith, Currie & Hancock LLP. His practice areas are construction law and government contracts. He received an A.B. from Harvard University, 1965, cum laude and a J.D. from the University of Virginia, 1968. Mr. Kelleher is co-author of Inspection Under Fixed Price Construction Contracts, Briefing Papers, No. 766, Federal Publications, Inc., December 1976; Preparing and Settling Construction Claims, Construction Briefings, No. 8312, Federal Publications, Inc., December 1983; Construction Litigation: Practice Guide with Forms, Aspen Law & Business; and Development in Federal Construction Contracts, Wiley Construction Law Update, Wiley Law Publications (1992–1999). He is also creator and editor of his firm’s construction law newsletter, Common Sense Contracting; co-editor of Common Sense Construction Law, Fourth Edition; and co-editor of Federal Government Construction Contracts. Mr. Kelleher is a member of the American College of Construction Lawyers; the American Bar Association, Public Contract Law Section; Associated General Contractors of America, Inc.; and Corps of Engineers, Naval Facilities Engineering Command, Governmental Affairs, and Contract Documents Committees. He was also Chair of the Federal Acquisition Regulation Committee (1999–2003).

Lori Ann Lange is an attorney in the Washington, D.C. office of Peckar & Abramson, P.C., where she specializes in counseling government contractors in all aspects of contracting with the federal government from proposal preparation to claims resolution. Ms. Lange has written extensively on government contracts and construction law issues and is a former revision author of McBride & Touhey’s Government Contracts. She also is a contributing author to Construction Checklists, State-by-State Guide to Construction Contracts and Claims, State-by-State Guide to Architect, Engineer, and Contractor Licensing, Construction Checklists, and Construction Claims Deskbook. Ms. Lange co-authored Construction Briefing Papers on Recovering Delay Damages for Home Office Overhead and Innovative Financing for Infrastructure Project. She received her B.A. and J.D. degrees from The George Washington University.

Adam K. Lasky is an associate in the Seattle office of Oles Morrison Rinker & Baker LLP. Mr. Lasky concentrates his practice on construction litigation and government contracts. He has represented contractors involved in government contract disputes before both state and federal courts, boards of appeal, and administrative agencies. Mr. Lasky received his J.D., cum laude, from the University of Minnesota Law School, where he was a Troegner Scholar. During law school, he served as a judicial extern for Hon. Janet N. Poston, Fourth Judicial District of Minnesota. He has also studied law in Ireland at the University College Dublin, and holds a B.A. in economics and political science from the University of Washington.

Michael C. Loulakis is the President/CEO of Capital Project Strategies, LLC, a specialized consulting firm that provides strategic procurement, contracting, and risk management advice to clients who develop and construct capital projects. Prior to forming the firm in 2007, Mr. Loulakis practiced law for almost 30 years with Wickwire Gavin, P.C. He has extensive and diverse experience in the design-build process, having represented clients on design-build projects around the world in a variety of sectors. He writes and speaks extensively on design-build and authored several highly regarded design-build publications, including Design-Build for the Public Sector (Aspen Law Publications, 2003) and Design-Build: Planning through Development (McGraw-Hill, 2001). Mr. Loulakis is an active member of the Design-Build Institute of America and played a lead role in the development of DBIA's model contracts. He graduated magna cum laude from Tufts University with a B.S.C.E. and received his J.D. from Boston University School of Law.

Lauren P. McLaughlin is a founding partner of the Tysons Corner, Virginia, office of BrigliaMcLaughlin, PLLC. Ms. McLaughlin received her B.A., Phi Beta Kappa, magna cum laude, from Trinity University in Washington, D.C., and her J.D. degree from Catholic University, Columbus School of Law. She has been in the private practice of law specializing in construction and government law for more than 10 years. Ms. McLaughlin is a regular contributor to the American Society of Civil Engineering's (ASCE) monthly publication where she co-authors articles addressing legal issues facing design professionals.

Tamara M. McNulty, LEED AP, is a partner in the Washington, D.C. office of Duane Morris LLP. Ms. McNulty is a trial lawyer and practices primarily in the areas of construction law, government contracts, and surety. She received both her B.A. and her J.D. from the University of Wisconsin–Madison. Ms. McNulty is a member of the ABA's Forum on the Construction Industry, the Tort and Trial Insurance Practice Section, the Public Contracts Division, the Virginia Bar Association's Construction Law section, and the National Bond Claims Association. She is on the Board of Directors of the Washington Building Congress. She is an instructor of advanced trial skills for the National Institute of Trial Advocacy. Ms. McNulty is the author of numerous articles and chapters of books on construction law and government contracting and has written two books on construction law, Virginia Construction Law and Maryland Construction Law.

Angeline R. Nelson is an associate in the Washington, D.C. office of Seeger, Faughnan, Mendicino P.C. Ms. Nelson received her J.D. from The George Washington University Law School and her B.A. in International Relations from Michigan State University. Her practice at Quagliano & Seeger involves government contract law as well as commercial and construction litigation. While in law school, Ms. Nelson focused primarily on government contract law and wrote her thesis on the use of cascading Set-Asides.

James F. Nagle is a nationally known expert in government contracts and construction law who received his Bachelor's degree from Georgetown University School of Foreign Service; his J.D. from Rutgers; and his LL.M. and S.J.D. in government contracts from the National Law Center, George Washington University. He practices with Oles Morrison Rinker & Baker in Seattle and chairs its Federal Practice Group. Besides litigation, he is a frequent expert witness, arbitrator, and teacher on federal contracts. Mr. Nagle has written six books on federal contracting: Nash, Cibinic and Nagle, Administration of Government Contracts, 4th ed. (George Washington University Press 2006); Whelan and Nagle, Cases and Materials on Federal Government Contracts, 3rd ed. (Foundation Press 2007), the leading law school textbook on the subject; Federal Procurement Regulations: Policy, Practice and Procedures, (American Bar Association Press [ABA] 1987); How to Review a Federal Contract and Research Federal Contract Law, 2nd ed. (ABA Press 2000); Federal Construction Contracting (Wiley Law Publications 1992); and The History of Government Contracting, 2nd ed. (George Washington University Press 1999). He has also co-authored and co-edited Washington Building Contracts and Construction Law (Butterworth (now Aspen) Publishers 1994).

Krista L. Pages is a Senior Contracts Specialist for Infrastructure with International Relief and Development, a government contractor in Arlington, Virginia. She is a past member of the Forum Governing Committee and past Division 10 Chair. Prior to joining IRD, Ms. Pages was Of Counsel with Winston & Strawn, LLP from 2001 to 2009 and a partner at Smith, Pachter, McWhorter and D'Ambrosio from 1989 to 2001. She specializes in government contracts and construction law and is the co-editor of False Claims in Construction Contracts (ABA 2007).

Bryan R. Phillips, AIA, is an attorney and licensed architect practicing in the Litigation Department, focusing his practice in the area of construction law. Prior to entering private practice, Mr. Phillips was a project architect at the international firms of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill and Ellerbe Becket, Inc. His architectural practice has included work on a variety of building types, including Class A office buildings, embassies, and courthouses. He represents project owners, developers, and general contractors in all phases of construction and on a wide variety of building types. With over 20 years of experience in the design and construction industry, Mr. Phillips provides a unique insight to his clients from contract negotiation to project close-out. The primary focus of his practice is negotiating and drafting construction agreements, professional design services agreements, design-build agreements, and construction management agreements. He has mediated, arbitrated, and litigated all manner of construction disputes including building defects and delay claims.

Lawrence M. Prosen, a partner with K&L Gates in Washington, D.C., concentrates his practice in the areas of construction litigation, government contracts and architects/engineers errors and omissions, and real estate and corporate transactional work. He has represented some of the largest construction contractors in the U.S. in both domestic and foreign projects ranging in value to over $200 million. He has represented clients in all aspects of bench and jury trials, as well as administrative appeals at various levels of county, state, and federal tribunals, arbitrations, and mediations. He has extensive experience in protests, having represented parties in protests at the federal, state, and local levels of government. Mr. Prosen has worked on real estate projects and transactions involving the sale, purchase, leasing, and construction of commercial, office, industrial, residential, and institutional buildings valued at up to and exceeding $250 million.

Steven L. Reed, a partner, in the Washington, D.C., firm of Smith, Currie & Hancock LLP, was an Administrative Judge, Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals, until retirement from federal service and was formerly with the Corps of Engineers Board of Contract Appeals. Mr. Reed received his B.S. magna cum laude from the University of Georgia and his J.D. degree from the University of Georgia School of Law. He worked as a contracts trial attorney and litigation counsel for the Corps of Engineers prior to joining the Boards of Contract Appeals. Since 1981, his federal government service and private practice have focused on federal government contracts, particularly construction contracts. Mr. Reed counsels and represents federal government contractors in dispute avoidance and resolution. He also has acted as a neutral in more than 50 ADR proceedings, both as a mediator and arbitrator, assisting with more than 220 disputed matters, most involving federal government contract disputes.

Joel S. Rubinstein, a partner with K&L Gates in Washington, D.C., has 35 years of experience in government contracts and construction law matters. He concentrates his practice in construction law, including bid issues, small business contracting, changes, claims, and other contract disputes before various administrative boards of contract appeals, state and federal courts, and arbitration tribunals, and has participated in actions involving prime contractors, subcontractors sureties regarding payment, and performance bond issues. Mr. Rubinstein has also been involved in Davis-Bacon Act cases and Walsh-Healey Act cases, as well as defense of OSHA citations. As a frequent author and lecturer, he addresses construction and government contracts issues of bid protests, contract payment and performance problems, small and minority business matters, drug-free workplace, federal supply schedule matters and minority certification.

Laurence Schor concentrates his practice on all phases of construction and government contracts law and has represented large and small business clients in various courts and forums across the United States. He served as the Assistant General Counsel for NASA Support in the office of the General Counsel, United States Army Corps of Engineers, and as an attorney at the Marshall Space Flight Center for NASA. He is now with Asmar, Schor & McKenna, PLLC. He has authored articles, book chapters, and course manuals on government contracts and construction topics and lectures regularly for professional groups on issues arising in these areas. He is an active arbitrator and mediator. Mr. Schor is a member of the Bars of the District of Columbia, Texas, and Maryland, as well as a member of the American Bar Association, Public Contract Law Section, where he chaired the Construction Committee and also served as Budget and Finance Officer on the governing Council. He is a member and lecturer for the ABA Forum Committee on the Construction Industry, and is also a member of the Federal Bar Association. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Southern Methodist University, a law degree from the University of Texas, Austin, School of Law, and a Master of Laws degree from George Washington University with an emphasis in Government Procurement. He is a founding member, served on the Board of Governors, and was the president (2001–2002) of the American College of Construction Lawyers. Mr. Schor has been recognized in Best Lawyers in America (2005–2009), Who's Who Legal, The International Who's Who of Business Lawyers, and Super Lawyers for the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, and is listed in Who's Who in America, Who's Who in American Law, and Who's Who in the World.

Stephen M. Seeger is a partner at the law firm of Seeger, Faughnan, Mendicino P.C., where he spends most of his time trying to keep the firm's government contracts and construction industry clients out of trouble. The balance of his work life is devoted to talking and writing about government contracts and construction law. Before his world was so limited, Mr. Seeger attended and graduated from Lehigh University and George Washington University Law School.

Stephen B. Shapiro is a partner in the Washington, D.C. office of Holland & Knight LLP. He is a board member of the Associated General Contractors of Metropolitan Washington, D.C. and serves on the NAVFAC, Corps of Engineers, Federal Acquisition Regulation, and Project Delivery Committees of the Associated General Contractors of America. Mr. Shapiro is also a member of the American Bar Association's Public Law Section and Forum on the Construction Industry. He received his B.A. from University of Maryland and his J.D. degree from George Washington University Law School. He has been in the private practice of law specializing in construction and government contracts law for more than 22 years. Mr. Shapiro represents public contractors and government entities in public contract matters throughout the United States.

Richard F. Smith is Senior Counsel to the Vienna, Virginia, firm of Smith Pachter McWhorter, PLC. Mr. Smith is a fellow in the American College of Construction Lawyers and a fellow in the College of Commercial Arbitrators. Twice he has been Chair of the Construction and Public Contracts Section of the Virginia State Bar, and has been on the Boards of the American College of Construction Lawyers, the Construction and Public Contracts Section of the Virginia Bar Association, and the ABA Forum on the Construction Industry. He received his B.S. from Wake Forest University, his L.L.B. from the University of Virginia, and his LL.M. in Government Procurement from George Washington University. Mr. Smith has been in private practice for more than 35 years and has an active ADR practice, having served as a mediator, arbitrator, project neutral, and DRB member on over 150 disputes. He is the editor of the Virginia CLE Construction Law Deskbook.

Donald A. Tobin is a partner in the Washington, D.C. office of Peckar and Abramson, PC. He has over 35 years of experience in litigation and general counseling in both construction and government contracting. He has represented government contractors and construction contractors in the negotiation and preparation of contract and subcontract documents. He has assisted in the preparation and negotiation of requests for equitable adjustment, with an emphasis on the pricing of extra work, delay and inefficiency claims. Mr. Tobin has litigated government contract cases at the Federal Boards of Contract Appeals and the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, and he has appeared often at the Government Accountability Office on bid protest matters. Mr. Tobin began his career as an attorney with the Naval Air Systems Command, specializing in government contracts. He is a graduate of the College of the Holy Cross (B.A. Mathematics 1969) and Boston College Law School (J.D. 1973 cum laude).

Daniel E. Toomey is a senior counsel in the Construction Group of the Washington, D.C. office of Duane Morris, LLP, and a mediator for the McCammon Group. Mr. Toomey clerked on the D.C. Court of Appeals and was an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. He previously served as president of the AUSA Association. Mr. Toomey is a graduate of the Georgetown University Law Center where he was an Adjunct Professor of Construction and Criminal Trial Practice Law for 20 years. He was a 2007 recipient of the Paul R. Dean Award from his alma mater for his distinguished service to Georgetown. Mr. Toomey is currently listed by Chambers and by the Virginia, District of Columbia, and Corporate Counsel editions of Super Lawyer magazine in the area of Construction Litigation. In 2000, he was elected as a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers. Mr. Toomey has written often for the Construction Lawyer and other construction publications and co-authored numerous chapters of books on construction and related topics. He has lectured on these topics throughout the United States.

Brian P. Waagner is a shareholder in the Tysons Corner, Virginia, office of Akerman Senterfitt, LLP. His law practice focuses on the representation of construction contractors and subcontractors seeking to resolve disputes on federal contracts. In addition to advising clients on contract administration issues and litigating affirmative claims in court proceedings, arbitration, and mediation, Mr. Waagner defends clients in cases alleging violations of the False Claims Act. Mr. Waagner began his law practice with Wickwire Gavin, P.C. He received his law degree from Cornell Law School.

Kenneth B. Walton is a Partner at Donovan Hatem LLP and focuses his practice on the defense of professionals, including engineers, architects and surveyors. He represents clients in federal and state courts, in both jury and nonjury cases, in Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New Hampshire, and has been admitted pro hac vice in a number of other states. Mr. Walton has handled litigation matters for design professionals arising out of a number of major construction projects. He has handled hundreds of mediations, arbitrations and trials for design professionals in cases across the country. Mr. Walton received his B.A. from St. Lawrence University and his J.D. from New England School of Law. After graduating from law school, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Frank H. Freedman in the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts.