

Joseph Angland is a partner in the New York office of White & Case LLP, where he focuses on antitrust litigation and counseling, as well as the antitrust clearance of transactions. He recently served as chair of the American Bar Association's Section of Antitrust Law - the world's largest association of competition lawyers. He was the principal editor of Antitrust Law Developments, the Section's treatise on United States antitrust law, and he has authored or edited over fifty other antitrust publications. Mr. Angland regularly lectures on both substantive antitrust issues and litigation techniques. At the request of the FTC and DOJ, he served as an advisor to the International Competition Network.

Mr. Angland received his JD from Harvard Law School in 1975 and his BS in Economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1972. He is a member of the Bars of New York and the District of Columbia.