

Jennifer L. Pratt has been with the Ohio Attorney General's Office since 1995 and has been the Chief of the Antitrust Section since 2003. She has participated in a wide array of major investigations and litigated matters from the Chlorine bid-rigging litigation to investigations of alleged anticompetitive activities in the professional sports, food additives and insurance industries. She led the litigation teams for the Ohio Attorney General's Office in the Columbia HCA/Blue Cross merger litigation, the Marion Hospital merger litigation and the Sorbates price-fixing litigation. She is a frequent speaker and author of publications on antitrust law, and since 2003 has served as Amicus Vice Chair for the National Association of Attorneys General's Antitrust Task Force. Jennifer received her Bachelor of Arts in Economics from Hanover College in 1983, her JD from Indiana University School of Law in 1987, and her MBA from Indiana University Graduate School of Business in 1987.
