Barry is a partner and co-chair of Fraser Milner Casgrain LLP's competition law group. His practice focuses on competition and antitrust law, providing strategic advice and representation in mergers and acquisitions, cartel investigations and prosecutions and all other provisions of the Competition Act. Barry also advises clients on compliance with the Investment Canada Act.

Barry has represented clients in the following industries: conventional oil & gas, oil sands, oilfield service, agriculture, banking, wireless telecommunication, pipelines, restructured electricity, trucking, airlines, and retail clothing and sports. Barry is one of the few counsel in Canada with trial experience in criminal cartel cases.

Barry was a member of the Executive Committee of the National Competition Law Section of the Canadian Bar Association from 2003 to 2009 and Section Chair 2007-2008.

Barry attended the International Competition Network's Annual Conference as the Canadian Competition Bureau's non-government advisor in Zurich in June 2009 and the Cartel Workshop in San Salvador in November 2007.

Barry's teaching and speaking roles include:

Guest Lecturer, University of Calgary, Transportation Law (Application of Competition Law to Transportation Industry), 2004-2008

Taught Reviewable Practices portion of the Competition Law Course to the Canadian Competition Bureau, February 2008

Lecturer, Faculty of Law, University of Alberta, Competition Law, 1993-2003

Barry is co-editor of the Canadian Competition Record, is a frequent speaker at Competition Law conferences and has written many articles on Competition Law.

Barry has been recognized in Lexpert, Chambers Global–The World's Leading Lawyers, Practical Law Company, and National Post Best Lawyers in Canada.

Barry was called to the Alberta Bar in 1980 and appointed Queen's Counsel in 2002.
