

Dr. Johannes Zöttl

Johannes Zöttl represents companies in antitrust regulation before the German Bundeskartellamt and the European Commission, including merger reviews and antitrust enforcement actions. He has extensive experience in counseling and litigation in the chemical, pharmaceutical, and automotive industries.

Recently, Johannes represented Abbott Laboratories in its $2.8 billion takeover of Advanced Medical Optics and Daiichi Sankyo in its $4.6 billion acquisition of Ranbaxy Laboratories before the European Commission. In matters involving the EU and German prohibitions on abusive single-firm conduct, Johannes currently is defending Heraeus in antitrust action for damages.

Johannes was the only German member of the ABA Antitrust Section's International Task Force (2007-2008), is a vice chair of the Section's Unilateral Conduct Committee, and is a member of the German Antitrust Lawyers Association (Studienvereinigung Kartellrecht e.V.) and the Frankfurt Antitrust Forum (Kartellrechtsforum Frankfurt e.V.).

Johannes has published numerous articles on EU and German antitrust law.

Education: Universities of Passau and Würzburg, Germany; University of Wales, UK (diploma with distinction); assistant lecturer at the Jean-Monnet-Chair for European Law, Würzburg; Ph.D in EU law (summa cum laude).
