

Why You Should Attend

If your practice involves litigation in environmental, mass torts or products liability matters, you must keep apprised of the latest developments in the law and how these cases are managed and taken to trial. This two-day CLE program is your opportunity to interact with and hear from in-house and trial counsel, experts and members of the judiciary as they address litigation issues and techniques in these practice areas. Join us for this remarkable seminar, and while you're at it, bring along the family to enjoy one of the finest winter resorts in the United States.

What You Will Learn

- The hottest issues and latest developments in environmental, mass torts and products liability litigation
- The appropriate way to respond to a client crisis, including initial response, preservation of evidence, controlling communications, maintaining privilege, managing claims, and dealing with the media
- In-house counsel will reflect on "the new normal" in litigation management and budgeting and will discuss the latest tools and developments
- Class action litigation developments five years after the passage of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005
- What to do when your case becomes a mass tort
- Legal and practical considerations at the intersection of bankruptcy and environmental law
- The current state of medical monitoring claims and how they are being treated around the country

Who Should Attend

- All attorneys who litigate in the areas of environmental, mass torts and products liability litigation
- In-house counsel and litigators who are interested in discussing the impacts of a down economy
- In-house counsel and seasoned practitioners needing an update from leading trial lawyers, experts and members of our judiciary on litigation techniques, trial presentation, and the latest legal developments
