

ARLENE ABADY

Arlene Abady is the managing editor of The Colorado Lawyer, a monthly journal of the Colorado Bar Association. Ms. Abady has worked for the Colorado Bar since 1981, building the law journal into a highly regarded practice tool for the attorneys in the state.

Prior to working for the Bar, Ms. Abady was a city reporter for a weekly newspaper, free-lance editor, and university press editor at two universities. She has a B.A. degree in English from Pennsylvania State University and a Master's degree in Applied Communications from the University of Denver.

She has been a board member of the Alliance of Professional Women and a member of the Colorado Women's Leadership Coalition, Women's Lobby of Colorado, and American Association of University Women. A long-time member of the NABE Communications Section, Ms. Abady helped establish the Communications Section's Luminary Awards, served as a Council member, and co-chaired a workshop. She also has received an Honorary Mention and a Luminary Award from the Section. In 2003, she was presented with the Section's Anne Charles Award.
