

Street Law Web Sites

The organizational web site for Street Law is www.streetlaw.org. From this site you can get to all the others below.

Street Law's law firm led diversity pipeline program is described at www.streetlaw.org/nalp. NALP is our national partner in this program. Participating firms are Troutman Sanders (Atlanta), Hunton and Williams (Richmond), Holland and Knight (Washington, DC), Wachtell (New York City), and Kirkland and Ellis (San Francisco)

Street Law's corporate legal diversity pipeline program is described at www.streetlaw.org/acc. ACC is our national partner in this program. There are more than 30 corporate partners for this program.

Street Law's program with LSAC to help law school based Street Law clinical programs develop a career choice (diversity pipeline) impact is described at www.streetlaw.org/lscac

There are web sites for teachers using the textbook – Street Law: A Course in Practical Law, published by Glencoe/McGraw-Hill.

Here are the URL's – for the 6th edition (2000) www.streetlaw.com; for the 7th edition (2005) www.streetlaw.glencoe.com; and for the 8th edition (2010) www.glencoe.com (and then scroll down to social studies and then to law-related education).

To contact Glencoe customer service – 1-800-334-7344

Street Law and the Supreme Court Historical Society have developed a site for high school teachers and students who are studying famous Supreme Court cases. This site has materials about the Supreme Court cases most often mentioned in state social studies content standards. The site receives more than 1,000,000 visits each year.
www.landmarkcases.org

Street Law and the Supreme Court Historical Society conduct a series of professional development institutes and seminars to help secondary school teachers expand and improve their teaching about the Supreme Court of the United States.
www.streetlaw.org/scsi

Lee Arbetman
Acting Executive Director Street Law, Inc.
240-821-1310
larbetman@streetlaw.org

